Talk

Engage your child's senses by describing everything around them - the smells, sounds, the way things feel, and taste.

Sing

Give your child a lightweight scarf or tissue and let them wave it while you're singing songs with them.

Read

Point to the word and then to the objects or pictures when you say the word as you're reading to your child. This helps your child make a mental connection between the written word and their prior knowledge.

Write

Let your child use cotton swabs and washable paint or colored water to practice making their shapes and letters.

Play

Play "I Spy." It's a great game for observation, making connections, and even creating mental maps that your child will refer back to as they get older.
